

One day I took an imaginary trip. It had monsters and Aliens running around in it. The monsters were as large as a dinosaur. The Aliens had big robots. I went where the Aliens were. The Alien's Robot shot bombs and missiles at me. The monsters were even bigger than the robot. The monsters had 3 eyes and 7 mouths. They were as green as a plant. One of the Aliens' missiles almost hit me. It missed and hit one of the monsters. It went boom, bang, kablam. The monsters declared War on the Aliens. The monsters almost destroyed all of the Aliens' robots. The Aliens were mad. The Aliens shot half of the monsters. The monsters said they did not want to fight anymore. The Alien agreed. They started shooting bombs and missiles at me. I was very afraid. I found a magic portal. I decided to take another trip, so I jumped in it. This Imaginary trip was even worse than the first one. It had big evil plants and big evil gorillas. The gorillas were almost the size of a dinosaur. The plant was the size of a whale. The gorillas destroyed everything. The plants ate lions. I decided to take another imaginary trip. This one was the best. It didn't have any monsters, Aliens, evil plants, or evil gorillas, but it had video games. That place was at home. All of the monsters were destroyed. I never saw them again. The Aliens, plants, and big evil gorillas were also destroyed. I never saw them again either.

Score Point: 4

This response reflects proficiency in narrative writing. There is adequate development, but the response loses focus because the writer discusses three different imaginary trips (aliens, gorillas, and at home with video games). Although there are very few writing errors, the response is choppy due to the lack of syntactic variety. The rudimentary vocabulary and description do not help to advance the storyline. Clearer focus and further development are required for a higher score.
